Gets detailed change reports of all the Active Directory objects in the specified domains and provides a detailed tree view of the Active Directory structure. Active Directory Change Tracker automatically schedules tasks to keep the computer's Active Directory and Group Policy operational. Through event-driven activities, the Change Tracker actively manages local Active Directory data and Group Policy changes to reduce the risk of data corruption. It notifies administrators via email or instant messaging when a change requires their immediate attention. The Change Tracker logs system activity for a specified period and saves it for analysis. For even more sophisticated use of Change Tracker's monitoring and reporting activities, administrators can create a custom action rule that retrieves the necessary Active Directory and Group Policy data from the domain controller and automatically applies the specified changes to the target computer. How the Change Tracker Works: Change Tracking is responsible for keeping track of the changes in Active Directory and Group Policy on the computers that connect to a domain controller. It is completely self-contained. It stores change information in a local database. The list of objects that it tracks changes for is defined by an administrator. It monitors local and remote systems for changes to these objects. Change Tracking detects changes to Active Directory and Group Policy, applies the necessary changes to the target computer, creates a notification to notify the administrator, and saves a log of all the actions performed. When a change is detected, a three-pronged process is used: 1. Record the object that was modified. This step is performed when a change is made to a new object, or when an object is changed. 2. Determine whether this change applies to a policy that is being enforced on the computer. For example, the Change Tracker must verify whether a password policy is being enforced before it modifies the computer's password. 3. Trigger an action. The Change Tracker notifies the system administrator when any of the following conditions are met: - The first time an object is changed - A new object is added - A previously disabled object is enabled - A previously enabled object is disabled The system administrator is notified of the change and can then decide whether to apply the change. If the system administrator does not respond for a specified period, the Change Tracker assumes that the system administrator has approved the action. Otherwise, the Change Tracker assumes that the system administrator does not want the action to be performed. Benefits of Change Tracking: It keeps track of changes to Active Directory and Group Policy on the computers that connect to a domain controller. It
