HD Wave Broadcaster Desktop Support Known issues Reviews macrumors' HD Wave Broadcaster review notes the following: User interface Initial setup and customization is easy. The control panel is clearly laid out, and the desktop view is shown in a pretty big window. You can customize the picture, and the number and type of streams is limited to what's installed on your computer.

Unlike some other applications, there's no need for separate stream URLs. You get an IP address and port number. The video quality is a little choppy at the start, but stabilizes as streams begin to play. Audio quality is fine. The icons and other user interface elements are very sharp and clean, and the default fonts are clear and readable. The panel's look and feel is very similar to that of the Remote Desktop client built into Mac OS X. It has some shortcomings, though. The window minimizes to the taskbar whenever you use the panel to stream Windows applications. If you try to move it to a different location, the panel 09e8f5149f

Provides an easy and cost effective way to stream directly from your desktop in either Standard or High Definition at a rate of up to 300 fps. Built on top of the same technology as our previous product HD Wave, the new HD Wave Broadcaster allows for our customers to connect one or more computers directly to the live HD Wave Host and provides full control over the stream, allowing you to convert the file to H264 MPEG-4 format for streaming.
