Field of the Invention The present invention relates generally to the detection of visual impairments and, more particularly, to a device for using ultraviolet light to detect objects on which a person's vision is impaired. 2. Description of the Prior Art A person's sense of sight becomes impaired after a given period of time as a result of normal aging. As a result, the ability to detect and monitor objects in space becomes diminished. These impairments can also result from eye disease or injury. It has been determined that ultraviolet (UV) light is particularly effective for the detection of objects on which the vision of a person is impaired. The human retina is made up of the inner and outer retinas. These retinas are composed of rods and cones. The rods have a higher level of sensitivity to light and are
